The Capitol Rotu Tuesdays are "Echo Day." It's a scream!

Washington Monument: A two-minute elevator ride to the top, a three-second bunger drop down.

Ford's Theatre: Balcony paintball tag.

This Week's Contest was suggested by Kevin Cuddihy of Fairfax, who wins a wooden fraternity-type butt paddle purchased on the New Jersey Turnpike in 1954. Kevin sent us a ticked-off letter responding to the Week 303 contest, the results of which are published below. It's about baby boomers. Kevin writes that the contest discriminates against young people like him: "Of course Chuck Smith and Elden Carmahan are going to win," Kevin notes respectfully, "because they are old farts." Kevin feels that The Style respectfully, 'because they are old tarts.' Kevin teels that I he Style Invitational is written by, and for, doddering fools. As far as we are concerned, Kevin is a hooligan who ought to be horsewhipped, by cracky. However, we have to admit he may have a point. Not long ago, in a contest involving song titles, some of the winning tunes were not entirely contemporary, such as 'Mairzy Doats.' Anyway, this week's contest is to suggest ways in which The Style Invitational or any other Washington area institution can become more relevant to younger people – say, to post-boomers. The first-prize winner gets a plastic Latrell Sprewell NBA dashboard doll, donated to the Style Invitational by Charlie Steiphics of Chattanogas. The doll was purchased for Invitational by Charlie Steinhice of Chattanooga. The doll was purchased for $1.99, but we are declaring its value to be $32,000. This is because, in the corner of the package, it says in little letters: "Caution: Choking Hazard." Charlie wins a lollipop with a real cricket embedded inside.

First runner-up gets the tacky but estimable Style Invitational Loser Pen. Other runners-up receive the covered Style Invitational Loser T-shirt. Honorable Mentions get the midly sought-after Style Invitational bunners sticker. Winners will be selected on the basis of humor and originally. Mail your entries to the Style Invitational Livens to the Style Invitati
