Putting Words in Their Mouths:

This week's contest: In 40 words or fewer, write a caption for either of these two generic cartoons drawn by famed Style Invitational artist Marc Rosenthal, just back from his triumphant two-man show in New York with Henri Matisse.

Examples:

1. It was an embarrassing situation all around. Leonard had wished that his wife "would become an animal in bed," but the Genie of the Box had somehow, tragically, misunderstood.

2. Only after long staves had been exchanged, after eyes had been locked onto, after gazes had burned in, did the box realize it could no longer trust either the dog or the man.

First-prize winner will receive a huge genuine two-carat crudely diamond, a value of nearly $50. Runners-up will get the coveted "Style Invitational" T-shirt and a tastive box of Peeps. As always, winners will be selected on the basis of humor and originality. Mail your entries to the Style Invitaitonal, Week 6, The Washington Post, 1110 15th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20071, or fax them to 202-334-4312. Entries must be received by Monday, April 15. Please include your address and phone number. Winners will be announced in two weeks. No purchase necessary. Employees of The Washington Post and their immediate families are not eligible for prizes.

Report From Week 4:

In which we asked you to complete this sentence: "If We Can Put a Man on the Moon, Why Can't We...."

AND NOW, THE WINNERS:

First, a little experiment. Stick your index finger in your mouth (or, if you prefer, someone else's mouth). Now place your finger on this big black heart here: , which symbolizes our goodwill toward you. Now rub your finger in widening circles on the page. Now look at your finger. Haha! Haha! What a dope you are. Don't you know that newspaper ink runs off like a bad habit? Dashes of you came up with this as your biggest gripe. Rest assured, we'll get right on it, just as soon as the troubled newspaper industry coughs up a billion dollars for research, and Gumby-shaped life forms are discovered on Io, the fifth moon of Jupiter.

Second, we wish to report that there seems to be a teeny bit of anti-male hostility out there, judging from the identical entries from more than 100 women saying, "If we can send a man to the moon, why can't we SEND THEM ALL THERE?"

The answer: Because then who would judge the Style Invitational? Girls???? Ahem. The winners:

Fifth Runner-Up: "Pass on first dance?" (Charles E. Brunowick, Springfield)

Third Runner-Up: "Figure out how to walk a cat?" (Stuart Segal, Vienna)

Second Runner-Up: "Offer sea monsters as a low-fat alternative to chicken?" (Rick Stone, Washington)

First Runner-Up: "Put an end to the tragic heartbreak of involuntary 'one whistle'?" (Felix McBundy, Silver Spring)

AND THE WINNER OF THE VINTAGE TOASTER:

"Remember why we did it?" (Geri, Tom and Heidi Klitsh, Wheaton)

The Honorable Mentions:

"Colonize the sun?" (Chuck Rainville, Baltimore)

"Put toilets in cars?" (Gwynn Eaton, Rockville)

"Just collect the rocks on Earth?" (Papun Devani, Arlington)

"Unearp CDs without needing an engineering degree?" (Booiba Boyle Cote, Gaithersburg)

Design a toilet and shower that can live in harmony?" (Daniel J. Berkowitz, Washington)

And last: "Bite above gripping for toasters?" (Christine Worthen Enos, Fairfax)
