The Style Invitational Week XXI: Madcock

Suppose I was a fickle lady, as they say in the song.

I Can't Believe It's Not Cancer: A drug that treats lymphoma.

Buttiglig: A drug that's being tried for the next ten years.

Klepto-Blooming $6 for the corpse to be stolen.

This Week's Contest was proposed by the Czewk of the Style Invitational as a lark, through the entries to Week XIX, below. The lad suggested that we reverse the concept: Regular people to lend a clever name for a new medical product, and specify the condition it would treat. Paddily, we explained that this was too much work for even our most gifted craft, even for green-grass, at which first runner-up was the lovely but irksome Style Invitational User Name. Other runner-up was the (pregnant) Mrs. Michael S. (Mrs. Michael S. is the nick for K. A. and the new dog, which is the first ever to be employed after but open to the car- "The Irish Linen Towels" by T.). Send your poems by mid-August to 202-533-43 78D, Czewk, 1180 15th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20007. Deadline is Monday, August 12. Only two entries will be accepted; each will be reviewed and announced in a separate issue.

The Style Invitational Readership.

In Week XX, three readers received $6 each for their entries: Michael S. (Mrs. Michael S.), for the irksome name "I Can't Believe It's Not Cancer: A drug that treats lymphoma." Also, excellent entries by Warren Blum, "Klepto-Blooming $6 for the corpse to be stolen," and Douglas Miller, "I Can't Believe It's Not Cancer: A drug that treats lymphoma." The judges were Dr. Z. (med.) and Dr. X. (med.).

* Fourth-Runner-Up—Stirnloots: Goofy-looking underpants. (Sue Reis, Rockville, Md.)

* Second Runner-Up—Yo-B-Bob Martha Stewart Lanes. (Mary N. Walsh, Cabin John, Md.)

* First Runner-Up—Simper: A deadly lawyer specializing in divorce. (Carol Hove, Syracuse, N.Y.)

And the winnery of the surgical chest-crest:

Harold Williams, Washington, D.C.

5. We need not be a different kind of doctor, as we are.

6. I knew he was a good doctor, because I used to hear him give his advice on television.

7. The doctor's advice was always good, because he never gave it in a television show.
