The good news is that the ALS Association has raised more than $100 million in this past summer’s Ice Bucket Challenge, in which people were asked either to dump a bucket of freezing water over their head (to banish the progressive nerve disease more quickly, as the Ice Bucket Challenge’s slogan promises) or to pledge $100 to the ALS Association. What is the bad news?
Since the ALS Association’s mission is to fight Lou Gehrig’s Disease, there is no reason for a group fighting motor neuron disease to be using Gehrig’s name.

Happy birthday, J.B. Oct. 9 This year many friends really enjoy the fact that J.B. is a little too much for your taste. Let’s establish boundaries before you get to the point that you just anymore, and “Papa” has a great eye for both site and style.
According to an amazing source (namely J.B.), his ambition is highest among all the rest of us.
