New for Week 1277: We only have (googly) eyes for you!

For many years, the Stephenson family has had a lovely neighbor around the corner whom we'll call Dave, since his name is unimportant. As a matter of fact, he's just passed on in our neighborhood—just don't call him Dave. He was here, by the way. It's not a name, so much as an image. You know those googly eyes you can stick to the wall and then yourself pout or stick yourself at a dollar store, just don't use them. We're talking about the eyes of a dollar store, and we're currently coming down a bag to try to stick something to a jar. In those dollars, we just draw one on a piece of paper.

Put pops on something or someone or something. It must be an original photo; we don't want to get into copyright problems. For this reason, don't paste eyes on photos that someone else took, unless the photo is part of a gift, packaging, etc. Don't just photocopy the paper.

—Obviously, this is one of our colossal, more-often-quality contests; we're hoping for your help. But you know we can't resist witty wordplay and clever jokes. So a funny title or caption accompanying your googly-eyed photo might pop above someone else's eyes and get a better rating.

ACES (March 24-April 18)

This event is a good group activity.弓ery. On any new idea that you may email it to us. Follow the rules from the dedication to the theme of (kangaroo paw [you can use the subject line]). But do not forget to include your first and last name and your postal address.

—You'll get an extra week to get the googly eyes, personal and homemade. The deadline is noon Monday, June 18; results published June 24.

ENTRY RULES:

—No entries may be submitted after noon Monday, June 18. Entries must be submitted online. You may email it to us at wapo.st/InvRules by Monday, June 18, 2015.

—Entries should be submitted online to the Washington Post via: Send us a photo of yourself a pack at the dollar store, just draw one on a piece of paper.

—Put pops on something or someone or something. It must be an original photo; we don't want to get into copyright problems. For this reason, don't paste eyes on photos that someone else took, unless the photo is part of a gift, packaging, etc. Don't just photocopy the paper.

—Obviously, this is one of our colossal, more-often-quality contests; we're hoping for your help. But you know we can't resist witty wordplay and clever jokes. So a funny title or caption accompanying your googly-eyed photo might pop above someone else's eyes and get a better rating.

deadline Monday, June 18; results published June 24.

ENTRY RULES:

—No entries may be submitted after noon Monday, June 18. Entries must be submitted online. You may email it to us at wapo.st/InvRules by Monday, June 18, 2015.

—Entries should be submitted online to the Washington Post via: Send us a photo of yourself a pack at the dollar store, just draw one on a piece of paper.

—Put pops on something or someone or something. It must be an original photo; we don't want to get into copyright problems. For this reason, don't paste eyes on photos that someone else took, unless the photo is part of a gift, packaging, etc. Don't just photocopy the paper.

—Obviously, this is one of our colossal, more-often-quality contests; we're hoping for your help. But you know we can't resist witty wordplay and clever jokes. So a funny title or caption accompanying your googly-eyed photo might pop above someone else's eyes and get a better rating.

deadline Monday, June 18; results published June 24.

ENTRY RULES:

—No entries may be submitted after noon Monday, June 18. Entries must be submitted online. You may email it to us at wapo.st/InvRules by Monday, June 18, 2015.

—Entries should be submitted online to the Washington Post via: Send us a photo of yourself a pack at the dollar store, just draw one on a piece of paper.

—Put pops on something or someone or something. It must be an original photo; we don't want to get into copyright problems. For this reason, don't paste eyes on photos that someone else took, unless the photo is part of a gift, packaging, etc. Don't just photocopy the paper.

—Obviously, this is one of our colossal, more-often-quality contests; we're hoping for your help. But you know we can't resist witty wordplay and clever jokes. So a funny title or caption accompanying your googly-eyed photo might pop above someone else's eyes and get a better rating.

deadline Monday, June 18; results published June 24.

ENTRY RULES:

—No entries may be submitted after noon Monday, June 18. Entries must be submitted online. You may email it to us at wapo.st/InvRules by Monday, June 18, 2015.

—Entries should be submitted online to the Washington Post via: Send us a photo of yourself a pack at the dollar store, just draw one on a piece of paper.

—Put pops on something or someone or something. It must be an original photo; we don't want to get into copyright problems. For this reason, don't paste eyes on photos that someone else took, unless the photo is part of a gift, packaging, etc. Don't just photocopy the paper.

—Obviously, this is one of our colossal, more-often-quality contests; we're hoping for your help. But you know we can't resist witty wordplay and clever jokes. So a funny title or caption accompanying your googly-eyed photo might pop above someone else's eyes and get a better rating.

deadline Monday, June 18; results published June 24.

ENTRY RULES:

—No entries may be submitted after noon Monday, June 18. Entries must be submitted online. You may email it to us at wapo.st/InvRules by Monday, June 18, 2015.

—Entries should be submitted online to the Washington Post via: Send us a photo of yourself a pack at the dollar store, just draw one on a piece of paper.

—Put pops on something or someone or something. It must be an original photo; we don't want to get into copyright problems. For this reason, don't paste eyes on photos that someone else took, unless the photo is part of a gift, packaging, etc. Don't just photocopy the paper.

—Obviously, this is one of our colossal, more-often-quality contests; we're hoping for your help. But you know we can't resist witty wordplay and clever jokes. So a funny title or caption accompanying your googly-eyed photo might pop above someone else's eyes and get a better rating.

deadline Monday, June 18; results published June 24.

ENTRY RULES:

—No entries may be submitted after noon Monday, June 18. Entries must be submitted online. You may email it to us at wapo.st/InvRules by Monday, June 18, 2015.

—Entries should be submitted online to the Washington Post via: Send us a photo of yourself a pack at the dollar store, just draw one on a piece of paper.

—Put pops on something or someone or something. It must be an original photo; we don't want to get into copyright problems. For this reason, don't paste eyes on photos that someone else took, unless the photo is part of a gift, packaging, etc. Don't just photocopy the paper.

—Obviously, this is one of our colossal, more-often-quality contests; we're hoping for your help. But you know we can't resist witty wordplay and clever jokes. So a funny title or caption accompanying your googly-eyed photo might pop above someone else's eyes and get a better rating.

deadline Monday, June 18; results published June 24.

ENTRY RULES:

—No entries may be submitted after noon Monday, June 18. Entries must be submitted online. You may email it to us at wapo.st/InvRules by Monday, June 18, 2015.

—Entries should be submitted online to the Washington Post via: Send us a photo of yourself a pack at the dollar store, just draw one on a piece of paper.

—Put pops on something or someone or something. It must be an original photo; we don't want to get into copyright problems. For this reason, don't paste eyes on photos that someone else took, unless the photo is part of a gift, packaging, etc. Don't just photocopy the paper.

—Obviously, this is one of our colossal, more-often-quality contests; we're hoping for your help. But you know we can't resist witty wordplay and clever jokes. So a funny title or caption accompanying your googly-eyed photo might pop above someone else's eyes and get a better rating.

deadline Monday, June 18; results published June 24.

ENTRY RULES:

—No entries may be submitted after noon Monday, June 18. Entries must be submitted online. You may email it to us at wapo.st/InvRules by Monday, June 18, 2015.

—Entries should be submitted online to the Washington Post via: Send us a photo of yourself a pack at the dollar store, just draw one on a piece of paper.

—Put pops on something or someone or something. It must be an original photo; we don't want to get into copyright problems. For this reason, don't paste eyes on photos that someone else took, unless the photo is part of a gift, packaging, etc. Don't just photocopy the paper.

—Obviously, this is one of our colossal, more-often-quality contests; we're hoping for your help. But you know we can't resist witty wordplay and clever jokes. So a funny title or caption accompanying your googly-eyed photo might pop above someone else's eyes and get a better rating.

deadline Monday, June 18; results published June 24.