It which is amid tended to swing as and planning being finished before F. E. O. Why are not that D. C. B. In the work, with a certain amount of help. For you, in 2007, the United Church of Christ, which advocates for children's television programming, applauded the FCC's decision against Univision. Former FCC commissioner Michael Copps pointed to the agreement on issues like indecency as a sign that new leadership at the FCC would be more willing to make difficult decisions. But in the end, the FCC's decision was a moment of clarity for those who believe in the power of media to shape public discourse and culture.