Style Invitational Week 992: Mittsterpiece Theatre — How would PBS shows adapt to commercial TV?

By Pat Myers
October 11, 2012

Oscar the Grouch becomes the new host of “Hoarders.”

“News12 Minutes With Jim Lehrer.”

One thing Mitt Romney said during the debate that made even President Obama wake up for a minute was his vow to “stop the subsidy to PBS,” even though “I love Big Bird.” (You’d think he would have loved Big Bird’s role in selling $47 million worth of products for the nonprofit Sesame Workshop, but we don’t think that’s what he meant.)

This week, in a contest suggested by Longtime Loser Larry Yungk: Suppose public-TV shows, past or present, were turned out onto the open market to make a living on commercial TV. Tell us what could happen, as in Larry’s examples above.

Winner gets the Inkin’ Memorial, the bobblehead that is the official Style Invitational trophy. Second place receives, for once from this contest, money. Two cash prizes, in fact: First, a seat cushion of clear plastic — the stiff kind your great aunt used to cover her nice upholstery with so that no one would hurt the extra-soft and comfortable fabric — stuffed with genuine finely shredded U.S. currency; it’s been refilled right back to the Invitational by Tom Witte, who won it in Week 164 (1996); I cannot guarantee, however, that it has ever actually cushioned the Hall of Fame Loser’s rear end. And we’ll throw in a genuine rubber $100 bill, donated by Dave Prevar. A budget-stretcher. Or a budget stretcher.
Other runners-up win their choice of a yearned-for Loser Mug or the ardently desired Grossery Bag. Honorable mentions get a lusted-after Loser magnet. First Offenders receive a smelly, tree-shaped air “freshener” (FirStink for their first ink). E-mail entries to losers@washingtonpost.com or fax to 202-334-4312. Deadline is Monday, Oct. 22; results published Nov. 11 (online Nov. 8). No more than 25 entries per entrant per week. Include “Week 992” in your e-mail subject line or it might be ignored as spam. Include your real name, postal address and phone number with your entry. See contest rules and guidelines at wapo.st/inviterules. The subhead for this week’s honorable mentions is by Kevin Dopart; the alternative headline in the “next week’s results” line is by Tom Witte. Report from Week 988 in which we asked for ways to speed up or to add excitement to various sports and leisure activities. Lots of people suggested that NBA games begin in the last five minutes, since that’s all that matters anyway. We said we’d be flexible about what constitutes a leisure activity. So: scratching, okay; even watching paint dry, okay. Doing one’s taxes or talking to tech support, no.

The winner of the Inkin Memorial

For speed and excitement: Dog racing: Turn the tables and have the greyhounds chased by genetically modified saber-toothed rabbits. (Martin Bancroft, Rochester, N.Y.)

2. Winner of the three-sided dice plus the instructions on exploding animal carcasses: For speed and excitement: Baseball: Spike their steroids with amphetamines. (Dixon Wragg, Santa Rosa, Calif.)

3. For excitement: Rock-Paper-Scissors: Use real rocks and scissors, but you still have to use your hand for paper. (Roy Ashley, Washington)

4. For speed: The Rubik’s Square. (Jim Reagan, Herndon, Va.)

A bit gamy: honorable mentions

Require that batters’ crotches be pre-scratched before they reach the plate. (Ralph Nitting, Rockville, Md.)

For every false start or delay of game, an NFL team has to replace one of its linemen with a cheerleader. (Katherine Stickers, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.)

Baseball: Pitchers who are replaced full through a trapdoor under the mound. (David Genser, Poway, Calif.)

Lugers slide down the track on their backs as usual, but headfirst, guided only by three rear-mounted dental mirrors. (Stephen Dudzik, Olney, Md.)

Soccer: Keep adding balls until someone finally scores a goal. (Anne Clark, Rochester, N.Y.)

Binary sudoku. (Kevin Dopart, Washington)

Instead of using chess clocks in tournaments, have crowds of spectators count aloud “One hippopotamus, two hippopotamuses….” (Don Kirkpatrick, Wayneboro, Pa.)

Divide the football field in half lengthwise, and play both halves at once — with the offense on one team playing the defense of the other. Better sideline views, and more time for tailgating. (Owen Hamnett, Lorton, Va., a First Offender)
A golfer has one minute to make a shot before the sprinklers come on. (Dan Steinbrocker, Los Angeles)

Bowling alleys should have ball-return cannons. (Michael Burch, Nashville, a First Offender; Rob Huffman, Fredericksburg, Va.)

The Game of REAL Life: Just hand all cash, stock certificates and properties to the banker. (Jeff Contompasis, Ashburn, Va.)

Call-and-response tennis: The audience divides into two groups to enthusiastically echo every grunt and squeal made by the players. (Amanda Yanovitch, Midlothian, Va.)

Hockey: Put the penalty box inside the goal. (David Genser)

Replace those boring X’s and O’s with real ticks, tacks and toes. (Laurie Tompkins, Rockville, Md.)

Institute 40-second clocks in stadium restrooms. When a stall’s clock expires, someone in a striped uniform bangs on the door, pels the user with yellow flags and blows his whistle until the person finishes. (Gregory Koch, Storrs, Conn.)

Water polo: Award points for removing an opponent’s swimsuit. (Mike Gips, Bethesda, Md.)

Taking a cue from baseball: Golfers should be acknowledged with their own “putting songs” blared over loudspeakers as they prepare their shots. (David Ballard, Reston, Va.)

Pictionary: The Muhammad card. (Danny Brauman, Chicago)

Watching paint dry: First take away the “wet paint” sign . . . (David Genser)

To make opera go faster, give the fat lady the first aria. (Beverley Sharp, Montgomery, Ala.)

Speed up the men’s 100-meter dash by renaming it “foreplay.” (Dion Block, Washington)

Boxing: Between rounds, don’t have those bikini-clad ring girls prance around degradingly with those signs. Have them fight each other. (David Genser)

Still running — deadline Monday night — is Week 991, the contest for neologisms incorporating the letter block V-O-T-E (in any order). See bit.ly/inv991.
