We’re looking for neologisms like “Sousaphobe” — in which you add or substitute B’s in an existing word to create a new one. (Bob Staake for The Washington Post)

By Pat Myers  March 3  Follow @PatMyersTWP

(Click here to skip down to the winning fake political trivia from Week 1161.)

Sousaphobe: “Ides, nothing – just beware anything with a march.”

Bransportation: the process of creating effective movements.

Seismolobby: A PAC for all the serious movers and shakers.
With his three blots of Style Invitational ink in this week’s results, Brendan Beary of Great Mills, Md., splashes past the 1,000-ink mark into that exclusive off-the-deep-end pool that includes just four other Losers in our 23-year history.

Brendan, a 54-year-old civilian “deputy something-or-other” at the Pax River naval base in Southern Maryland, started entering the Invite back in 1996, getting a blot of ink here and there like a normalish person for several years, until he zoomed from eight inks in Year 10 to 113 in Year 11. Brendan went on to score the most ink ever in a single year — a ridiculous 179 blots in 2005-06 — before dialing it back to something a bit closer to sanity, but continuing to make regular appearances in the Losers’ Circle every year, racking up 36 wins and 98 runners-up, including this week’s fourth place.

As Brendan joins Russell Beland, Chris Doyle, Tom Witte and Kevin Dopart in the Double Hall of Fame, he’s opted to accept the Empress’s “award” she’s offered to these milestoners: to serve as a guest judge for a week, and to choose the contest he’ll be judging. We assumed that Brendan, a published poet and an ink-snarfer in umpteen verse contests, would want to judge poems, but instead he chose a neologism contest modeled on the K-themed one that Kevin judged in 2014: Change a word, phrase or name by adding one or more B’s, and/or by replacing one or more letters with B’s, and define your new term, as in Brendan’s examples above. The E will send Mr. B a list of all the week’s entries minus any identifying or personal information; he won’t know whose work he chose until we publish it here.

Winner gets the Inkin’ Memorial, the Lincoln statue bobblehead that is the official Style Invitational trophy. Second place receives the latest in Loser Barbara Turner’s creations made from old Loser T-shirts. In past years she made two dresses; this year Barbara’s stitched together several Invite shirts with others to make a great length of multicolored fabric you wrap around yourself — it’s called the Sorry. THE thing to wear to the Losers’ Flushies awards May 21. (Photo below.)

Other runners-up win their choice of a yearned-for Loser Mug, the older-model “This Is Your Brain on Mugs” mug or a vintage Loser T-shirt. Honorable mentions get one of our lusted-after Loser magnets, “Magnet Dum Laude” or “Falling Jest Short.” First Offenders receive a smelly tree-shaped air “freshener” (FirStink for their first ink). Email entries to losers@washpost.com.
Deadline is Monday night, March 14; results published April 3 (online March 31). You may submit up to 25 entries per contest. Include “Week 1165” in your email subject line or it might be ignored as spam. Include your real name, postal address and phone number with your entry. See contest rules and guidelines at wapo.st/InvRules. The headline for this week’s results was submitted by Chris Doyle, Danielle Nowlin and Tom Witte; the honorable-mentions subhead is by Beverley Sharp. Join the lively Style Invitational Devotees group on Facebook at on.fb.me/invdev. “Like” the Style Invitational Ink of the Day on Facebook at bit.ly/inkofday; follow @StyleInvite on Twitter.

The Style Conversational: The Empress’s weekly online column, published late Thursday afternoon, discusses each new contest and set of results; this week the E will offer some of Brendan Beary’s Greatest Hits among his 1,000 inks. Especially if you plan to enter Week 1165, check it out at bit.ly/conv1165.

And the results of the Style Invitational contest announced four weeks ago . . .

Wrap yourself in Loserific glory with the custom-made Sorry, this week’s second prize. Its creator, Barbara Turner, can show you how to wrap it better than the Empress managed. (Mark Holt)

A super PAC of lies: Report from Week 1161

In Week 1161 we asked for bogus “facts” about politicians. This season, the following list might be the only bigger collection of lies than a debate transcript.

4th place:

More a fan of football than baseball, President Truman annually attended Redskins’ home openers to throw out the first interception. (Brendan Beary, Great Mills, Md.)

3rd place:

Bernie Sanders’s high school debate coach was slightly hard of hearing. (Danielle Nowlin, Fairfax Station, Va.)
And the winner of the Inkin’ Memorial:

To add some levity to his second inauguration, President Clinton added “in bed” under his breath to the phrases he repeated taking the oath of office. (Jeff Shirley, Richmond, Va.)

What lies beneath! Honorable mentions

When young Hillary Rodham passed secret notes to friends in class, she kept copies in an open jar on her desk. (Gary Crockett, Chevy Chase, Md.)

“Caucus” is a Latin term for “small gathering of white people.” (Warren Tanabe, Annapolis, Md.)

Although George H.W. Bush did not know it at the time, Willie Horton was a registered Republican. (Mark Raffman, Reston, Va.)

Bernie Sanders decided to run for president after discovering that an anagram of “Hillary Clinton” is “I’ll cry a lot in NH.” (Jesse Frankovich, Lansing, Mich.)

Before inventing hip-hop, Alexander Hamilton played both calypso and reggae music as a youth in the Caribbean. (Dave Letizia, Alexandria)

Ben Carson actually can perform brain surgery in his sleep. (Rob Cohen, Potomac, Md.)

Calvin Coolidge did not take the oath of office at his inauguration in 1925; instead, he had the Chief Justice read it in full, then replied, “What he said.” (Brendan Beary)

Cletus P. Harvey, father of Steve Harvey, was the Chicago Tribune Linotype operator who printed the “Dewey Defeats Truman” front page in 1948. (Roy Ashley, Washington)

Despite a subpar Super Bowl, write-in votes lifted Cam Newton to a third-place finish in the South Carolina primary. (Barry Koch, Catlett, Va.)

Donald Trump moonlights as a male protestant. (Jack McBroom, Fort Valley, Va.)

Feeling that the game was rigged, young Bernie Sanders tried to get each of the three-card monte players in Brooklyn broken up into three one-card monte players. (Gary Crockett)

---

2nd place

and “The Trump Coloring Book”:

Marco Rubio takes frequent water breaks to cool his CPU. (Dave Silberstein, College Park, Md.)
Carly Fiorina’s claim to have been class valedictorian is true; however, she was home-schooled. (Neal Starkman, Seattle)

Ben Carson’s childhood home is a converted grain silo. (Mike Gips, Bethesda, Md.)

Bill Clinton once had sex with Hillary Clinton in the White House. (Rob Huffman, Fredericksburg, Va.)

Following Ted Cruz’s reading of Dr. Seuss on the Senate floor, Donald Trump tweeted: “I’m going to ban the Star-Belly Sneetches.” (Todd DeLap, Fairfax, Va.)

John Ellis Bush’s nickname as a kid was “!” (Ward Kay, Vienna, Va.)

John Nance Garner’s famous quote about the vice presidency “not being worth a bucket of warm spit” was inspired by an inaugural gift from his brother-in-law. (Jamie Martindale, McLean, Va.)

On quiet nights in the White House, FDR loved to put baseball cards in the spokes of his wheelchair and have an aide push him through the halls at full speed. (Brendan Beary)

Rahm Emanuel gargles with soap every morning, but it doesn’t help. (Mark Raffman)

To distance himself from the Russians, Richard Nixon changed his dog’s name from Chess to Checkers. (Edward Gordon, Austin)

Though he doesn’t cultivate an image of an intellectual, Donald Trump has a vocabulary of nearly 800 words. (Larry McClemons, Annandale, Va.)

Showing fiscal restraint, Ben Carson proposed building a wall only around New Mexico. (Kevin Dopart, Washington)

President James Garfield had a morbid fear of cats. (Jerry Birchmore, Springfield, Va.)

Sarah Palin once gave an off-the-cuff response in the form of a complete sentence containing three relevant subordinate clauses. (Jeff Contompasis, Ashburn, Va.)

Sen. Barry Goldwater’s real first name was Barack, too (Brendan Beary)

Furious about Ted Cruz’s “New York values” gibe, Donald Trump tweeted: “Stupid Cruz accuses me of having values! Rediculous loser!” (Frank Osen, Pasadena, Calif.)

The Washington Monument has one stone for every place George Washington is known to have slept. It continues 150 feet below ground level. (Steven Litterst, Newark, Del.)

Richard Nixon’s campaign staff had to talk him out of a plan to adopt his own version of Eisenhower’s signature slogan, “I Like Ike.” (Mark Raffman)
And Last: Working as a duo, Bernie SANDERS and his Loser pal (Jim LUBELL, Portland, Ore.) have rung up more than 1,500 inks in The Style Invitational under the anagrammatic pseudonym RUSSELL BELAND. (Chris Doyle, Denton, Tex.)

Get Entertainment Alerts
Big stories in the entertainment world as they break.

E-mail address
Add

Share
Tweet

0 Comments

Most Read

1 ABT star Julie Kent is Washington Ballet’s new artistic director

2 The 2016 finalists for the PEN/Faulkner Award

3 Celebs take to social media to cut trolls down to size

4 More hip-hop coming to Kennedy Center for 2016-2017 season

5 At the Studio Museum in Harlem, a curator who loves art ‘on a cellular level’

Unlimited Access to The Post. Just 99¢

Our Online Games
Play right from this page

Mahjong Dimensions
Genre(s): Strategy
It’s 3D Mahjong: you don’t even need to wear 3D glasses!

The Sunday Crossword by Evan Birnholz
Genre(s): Word
Online crossword.

Genre(s): Card
Spider Solitaire is known as the king of all solitaire games!

Genre(s): Word
Challenge your crossword skills everyday with a huge variety of puzzles waiting for you to solve.