Veteran ballerinas do not need to wear the usual reinforced toe shoes, because the bones in their feet have become fused en pointe. (Paul Kocak)

The Style Invitational — since 1993 your go-to place for Genuine Fake News — presents its latest call for fictoids, in a category suggested long ago by Loser Christina Courtney: This week: Tell us some totally bogus trivia about clothing or fashion, as in the examples above from our various earlier Invite fictoid contests, plus our artist Bob Staake’s Own Loopy Mind.

Submit entries at this website: wapo.st/enter-the-invite-1253 (all lowercase; note the slightly different wording from the usual).

Winner gets the Lose Cannon, our Style Invitational trophy. Second place, apropos of this week’s contest, receives this just-completed and clearly

THEY WILL ROCK Q: 'ASK BACKWARDS' RESULTS

Week 1249 was the 36th running of our contest in which we offered a list of short "answers" and the Losers supplied the questions. Too many people to credit noted that the fidget spinner, the infinity scarf and Cher all seem to go on forever, and that something Whole Foods doesn’t have is half-and-half.

4th place:

A. 280 characters.
Q. To stave off helicopter parents, what’s the safest criterion for choosing a high school musical? (Ward Kay, Vienna, Va.)

3rd place:

A. Mike Pence’s favorite pastime.
Q. What are cold showers? (Rob Huffman, Fredericksburg, Va.)

2nd place

and the T-shirt saying 'Don’t blame me, I voted for Hillary' in Maori:

A. Melania’s left shoe.
Q. Can you name one of the three ostentations heels attached to the first lady? (Jesse Frankovich, Grand Ledge, Mich.)

And the winner of the Lose Cannon:

A. A fidget spinner, an infinity scarf and Cher.
Q. What does your kid think is cool, your mom think is warm and your grandpa think is hot?
(Deb Stewart, Damascus, Md.)

Q and nays: Honorable mentions
